Cust. Reviews

Dirty Helen, legendary tavern owner, supposedly could out-swear anybody in town. An American original, just like Barley Island's tavern-style Brown Ale.

All Ales

Ale beers are brewed with top-fermenting (actually ferments throughout the wort) yeast which allows for rapid fermentation at warmer temperatures. Ales include everything with ale in the name (pale ale, amber ale, etc.), porters, stouts, Belgian specialty beers, wheat beers and many German specialty beers. Generally have a more robust taste, are more complex and are best consumed cool (45F or a bit warmer) rather than cold.

All Lagers

Lager beers are brewed with bottom-fermenting yeast which ferments more slowly and at colder temperatures. Lagers include pilsners, bocks and doppelbocks, Marzens/Oktobefests, Dortmunders and a few other styles found mostly in Germany. Best consumed at a cooler temperature than lagers, although anything served at less than 38F will lose most of its flavor.
